My first year at Oxford has been a whirlwind of sunshine, rain, wind and snow...In retrospect I can say that I enjoyed exam season, it really brought me closer to my community here at Oxford and made me call Rhodes House home as I spent most of my days in Roseberry studying, napping and procrastinating.

The Application Process

Myth Number One

I'm not the type of person who can win a Rhodes Scholarship.

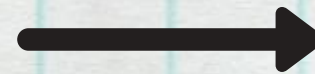

We welcome applications from talented young persons of diverse backgrounds. Selection is made without regard to gender, gender identity, marital status, sexual orientation, race, ethnic origin, colour, religion, social background, caste, or disability.

Myth Number Two

I have to be top of my class.

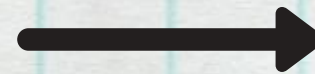

Academic ability is important as you will need to be able to gain entry to the University of Oxford; however, equally important is your commitment to serve others.

Myth Number Three

I can't apply because my country is not listed as a Rhodes constituency.

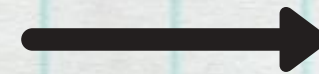

We now offer two Global Scholarships for anyone who does not meet the existing selection criteria for the current Rhodes constituencies.

Myth Number Four

You have to have done months of volunteer work abroad or started your own NGO.

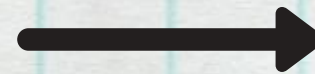

As long as you demonstrate that you have worked to improve the lives of others, is what counts. It can be done in a multitude of ways in your own neighbourhood. You will also need to be able to talk in the interview about what you hope to do in the future.

Myth Number Five

Most Scholars end up as political leaders.

Today's Rhodes Scholars include Presidents and Prime Ministers, but also medical researchers, social workers, artists,
journalists, lawyers,
teachers, activists, poets,
doctors
and many more!

What is the Rhodes experience like?

"I am exceedingly grateful for the opportunity to study at the University of Oxford. I have made many lovely friends amongst the Rhodes community, as well as in my classes and college."

Jean Balchin
(New Zealand & Trinity 2018)

"Rhodes House has afforded me the opportunity to make lifelong friendships with great minds from diverse backgrounds, from whom I have learned so much."

Emmanuelle Dankwa (West Africa & St Peter's 2018)

"The thing I enjoyed the most about Rhodes House was how so many Scholars from so many different backgrounds are put together, forcing us to embrace our differences and learn from each other's cultures."

Xilin Jiang (China & University 2017)

"I am grateful to be a part of the Rhodes community because it is an intellectually stimulating environment that helps me better understand political and social issues outside of my discipline."

Ian Sander (Prairies and St Peter's 2018)
